5. Manipulation Lies and Politics

Politics was never really discussed in my house growing up, and I never really gave it much thought. I just figured my parents didn't want to argue like so many of my friends' parents did. We talk about politics all the time now, and it hit me only recently as to why that is. My parents are so invested in the politics of this country now ...

6. State of Confusion Political Manipulation and the Assault

There is the old political saying: politics makes strange bedfellows. Envy. Welch does an admirable job of describing envy as a normal and pathological emotional state. I think Welch's claim that envy is the most underreported factor in politics may be true because it is one of the seven cardinal sins.
